Mr. Hughes said, "We have

> Mr. Ueberroth declined to speculate what effect, if any, the State Department decision would have on whether the Soviet Union chooses to participate in the Summer Games. Soviet participation is seen by committee members as cru-cial to the prestige and financial health of the Games.

There was no immediate reaction from the Soviet Union. On Jan. 19, Marat Gramov, president of the Soviet National Olympic Committee, complained at a Moscow news conference that the State Department was balking at granting entry to the attaché and warned, "When the State Department intervenes and tries to make us come to Los Angeles as they wish, we won't agree and we refuse to cooperate." Mr. Yermishkin was to have arrived in Los Angeles on Thurs-Thursday, after first reports of the visa denial: "Frankly, we are puzzled by the length of time it took to make this decision. The timing is critical because of the short time remaining — about 20 weeks — before the 1984 Olympic Games."

But the State Department offi-cial told the AP that when the Soviet Union made its initial request for the six-month visa, "we told them in December, within days of their request, that there would be prob-lems." The official said the formal visa application was not submitted until Feb. 10 and was turned down on Feb. 28, "Eighteen days is not an exaggerated time in these mat-ters," the official said.

In Moscow, a U.S. Embassy official who asked not to be identified said Friday the Russians were warned in advance that Mr. Yermishkin would be denied a visa because of his "personal background," the AP reported.

House Panel Approves Tax Increase Of $49.3 Billion Over Next 4 Years

By Robert D. Hersbey Jr. New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The House Ways and Means Committee has approved $49.3 billion in tax increases over the next four years, including additional revenues from liquor, tigarettes and telephones.
The committee, meeting Thursday, drafted a bill that will be an important part of the House's coninbution to the effort in both chambers of Congress to reduce the federal budget deficit.

Although details of the committee's bill are subject to change on the floor of the House of Representatives and in conference with the Senate, its main elements are expected to be part of the legislation that will go to President Ronald

The committee met from 9 A.M. to just before midnight in an effort to achieve the goal of its Democratic chairman, Representative Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, to produce $50 billion in new revenues. As the panel adjourned, Mr.

Rostenkowski said the bill "rests on solid bipartisan footing" and is "a first installment on an ever-increasing debt."

He added, "Its impact falls on the upper reaches of the income scale — not the broad middle." The bill, as approved by the committee, would increase the federal excise tax on alcoholic beverages, excluding wine and beer, by onethird. If the tax is entirely passed on to consumers, as seems likely, it will add about 79 cents to the retail Price of a liter (1.06 quarts) of 80-Proof (40-degree) whiskey.

Plan May Affect Citizens Abroad

WASHINGTON — The House Ways and Means Committee has voted to postpone three scheduled increases in the earned-income exclusion for Americans abroad, as part of a $49.3-billion deficit reduction package.

Under the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, Americans abroad can exclude up to $75,000 of 1982 income from federal income tax.

The exclusion is scheduled to rise to $80,000 for 1983 income, $85,000 for 1984, $90,000 for 1985 and $95,000 for 1986. The Ways and Means Committee proposal, if approved, would delay the 1984 increase to 1987, the 1985 increase to 1988 and the 1986 increase until 1989.

Senate Acts To Curb Reagan On Exports

By Stuart Auerbach

WASHINGTON — The Senate has approved legislation giving the president far less authority than the Reagan administration had sought to control strategic exports to Soviet bloc nations.

But the hill, passed by voice vote late Thursday after 25 hours of debate over a four-day period, is far stronger than legislation passed last October by the House, setting up a confrontation in a conference expected to start within the next

The Senate and House bills attempted to strike a balance between two important consider-ations — U.S. national security concerns and needs for American businesses and farm groups to sell in overseas markets.

The Senate bill leans more toward national security concerns, while the House tilts in the direction of export sales.

The gap between the two bills, which extend the Export Adminis-tration Act, was considered so great that doubts have been raised on Capitol Hill about whether a compromise can be reached. The act, which expired Sept. 30. bas been extended by temporary reso-lutions. The latest extension expires March 31.

The Reagan administration reg-istered strong disagreement with at least five provisions of the bill passed by the Republican-con-trolled Senate, It has even stronger objections to the version passed by the Democratic-controlled House.

The administration objects to Senate provisions that would curtail the president's power to instirute grain embargoes, affect a nuclear agreement with China that President Ronald Reagan is expected to sign during his visit to Beijing next month, and tighten controls on shipments of nuclear technology or components to countries that refuse to allow inspections of their atomic facilities.

Acother amendment, put for-ward by Senator Jesse Helms, Republican of North Carolina, underculs recent administration high technology to China. The administration efforts were credited by Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige with easing tensions between Washington and Beijing. The sharpest debate in the Senate occurred just before the bill's final passage. Senators Christopher J. Dodd, a Connecticut Democrat, and William L. Armstrong, a Colorado Republican, offered an amendment to remove businesssupported provisions of the bill restricting embargoes in cases of existing contracts. The Dodd-Armstrong amendment was defeated, 65-2 Mr. Dodd argued that the amendment would strengthen the Senate bill in one of the few areas where it was weaker than the House-passed version. Under the amendment so-called contract sanctity provisions would not apply in cases of aggression, such as the Soviet intervention in tions of buman rights, or nuclear weapons tests. Mr. Dodd said it would preserve the president's ability to apply sanctions as an element of U.S. foreign policy. Mr. Armstrong said that, by opposing the amendment, the Senate would be putting commercial interests ahead of a firm stand against buman rights violations of terrorism. But Senator John Heinz, Republican of Pennsylvania, floor manager of the bill, cited Reagan administration opposition to the amendment and said it would label the United States as an unreliable

In his first policy speech since assuming power on Feb. 13, Mr. Chernenko cited several areas for such actions. These ranged from ratification by the United States of the underground nuclear test ban treaty to achieving accords on a prohibition of anti-satellite weapons or obernical weapons.

Tactical Shift In Campaign Is Ordered By Mondale

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches WASHINGTON - Walter F. Mondale, declaring that be is now in a two-man race for the Democratic presidential nomination, has ordered drastic changes in his campaign and lashed out at Gary Hart, whose surprise victory in Tuesday's New Hampshire primary appeared to be paying dividends.

After hearing reports that he faces possible defeat in upcoming contests unless be responds quickly to the challenge from the Colorado senator, Mr. Mondale and his advisers decided to produce new television ads, some of which are ex-pected to attack Senator Hart by name. They also are revising travel schedules and redesigning campaign events.
Primaries and caucuses involv-

Massachuserts.
Talking to reporters whom he had summoned to his office, Mr. Mondale said Thursday: "It's now clear there's a new day and a different race. We're in for a long, tough fight that could go all the way to the convention. We have to slug it out. It's a two-man race and it's very close.

ed the Colorado senator in the three Southern states were small ones in which the media outnumbered supporters. He said his New Hampshire vic-

Democrats Accuse Cabinet Agencies Of Hindering Primary Voting Abroad

U.S. Asked to Ban Some Painkillers

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - A panel of experts convened by the National Institutes of Health has urged that "serious consideration" be given to banning nonprescription use of painkillers that contain two or more active compounds.

The most widely sold painkillers of this type, which combine aspirin and acetaminophen, include Excedrin and Vanquish. The panel warned Wednesday that people who took large doses of such drugs for long periods - for example, 10 tablets a day for three years could develop a form of kidney disease. Very heavy and sustained nies and possibly irregular use, they said, could also increase a user's susceptibility to cancer. The panel, acknowledging that for research and engineering, Rich-result of painkiller abuse was rare, restricted its inquiry to over-thecounter medicines. It did not address the question of whether such compound painkillers should be allowed by prescription.

LET US HELP THEM HELP THEMSELVES

In many countries, individuals and organisations are acting to give the poorest the means to come up in the world and act towards a better future, in order to try and break the vicious circle of poverty and underdevelopment.

These well-established bodies are our natural partners in a field they know well. With them, we create and carry out concrete programmes: the creation of nursery schools in the new slums in North Bombay; a travelling creche to serve construction sites in Poona; help for women's organisations in the mountains of Maharashtra; help for school drop-outs in a slum of Poona City (India), and others.

Our role and support are meant to be short-life, and aim at helping our partners at a critical point in their own evolution. In order to maximise its effectiveness, A.C.I.A.D.'s co-ordinators give on-the-spot, short term support at vital stages of the programmes, until these are self-supporting.

A.C.I.A.D. is a trust registered in 1983 under the 1901 French Non-Profitable Organisations Act: the sociologists, doctors, economists among its members have considerable field experience. The competence of the team has won it support from a number of national as well as international bodies.

But we need your help too: support our activities and send your donation to FONDATION DE FRANCE-A.C.I.A.D., 44, rue Ginoux - 75015 PARIS (FRANCE). You will be sent a receipt and a

South Africa, Mozambique Unveil Outline of Security Pact

New York Times Service CAPE TOWN -- South Africa and its Marxist neighbor, Mozam-bique, announced Friday that they had "agreed on the principal fea-tures of a nonaggression and good-neighborliness and goodneighborliness agreement" and would establish a joint commission to oversee its implementation.

The joint announcement by the South African foreign minister. R.F. Botha, and the Mozambican economic affairs minister, General Jacinto Veloso, represented a fur-ther sign of the fragile truce between Pretoria and its black-ruled neighbors.

The plan to sign a nonaggression treaty was announced Feb 20 when Mr. Botha flew to Maputo, the Mozambican capital, and met with President Samora Machel and other officials. General Veloso beld

Jackie Coogan, 69, Dies; First Child Movie Star

By Ted Thackrey Jr. Los Angeles Times Service

SANTA MONICA, California - Jackie Coogan, 69, who in Char-lie Chaplin's "The Kid" became the first child movie star and who was known to later audiences as Uncle Fester in television's "The Addams Family," died Thursday after a heart attack.

His childhood salary topped 22,000 a week, but his greatest impact on the motion picture industry may have come in 1938, when a lawsuit seeking to recover his squandered fortune from his mother and stepfather led to passage of a law popularly known as the "Coogan Act."

Born Oct. 24, 1914, in Los Angeles, Jack Leslie Coogan was the son of vaudevillians. He made his first screen appearance at the age of 18 months in "Skinner's Baby."

When Jackie was 6, Chaplin made him his co-star in "The Kid," story about a tramp raising an abandoned baby, which became the hit of 1921. The young actor's popularity rose higher with such films as "Peck's Bad Boy," "Oliver Twist," "Circus Days," "Little Robinson Crusoe," "A Boy of Flanders,"

"The Rag Man" and "Old Clothes," all made from 1921 to

Then came "Johnny, Get Your Hair Cut," in 1927, when Jackie's carls, the final insignia of childhood, were trimmed on camera While no longer in great domand, the young man was still the owner of Jackie Coogan Productions Inc., which was charged with investing the $4 million or so he bad earned as a child star.

He turned 21 in 1935 and was to have assumed control of his fortune, but that was postponed by an automobile accident in which he was injured and his father was

When he recovered, he found that his mother, who had married the business manager of Coogan Productions, was in no hurry to turn over the money. He sued his mother and stepfather and discovered that the company had suffered "reverses" that had pared its assets to $252,000. In the end, the court awarded him half of that.

The case led to the California Child Actors Bill, intended to protect child performers from such

In World War II Mr. Coogan was a glider pilot in the China-Burma-India theater. After the war, he ran a war surplus store, a dance studio and a used car dealership, then returned to movies in 1947 in "Kilroy Was Here."

He also played character roles in "French Leave" "Skipalong Ro-senbloom," "Outlaw Women,"
"The Proud Ones," "Lonely-hearts," "Night of the Quarter Moon" and "John Goldfarb.

The color scheme, combining a deep purple for the triangular brick facades, a grayish-white for the snowflakes, and the blackish canal water, is unmatched in Neo-Impressionism. The illusionistic effect of a landscape seen through a cur-tain of falling snowflakes is uncanny. It is done with extreme care, in contrast to the looser brushwork of Impressionism. Yet it has a very light touch, like most of Levy-Dhurmer's work, made lighter still by the technique, pastel on paper. PRAGUE — Given the musical world's penchant for anniversaries, the Czech school of composers has given this year's artistic policy-makers a ready-made program. By a happy coincidence, Leos Janacek was born 130 years ago, Bedrich Smetana died 100 years ago, Antonin Dvorak died 80 years ago and Bohuslav Martinu died 25 years ago.

The flowering of Czech music over the last 100 years follows a period of Czech cultural assertiveness in the last of the last 100 years follows a period of Czech cultural assertiveness in the latter half of the 19th century, when German influences began to be challenged and Czech composers developed their individual language — often spiced with traditional folk culture.

In a European context, the oumber of Czech works that form a regular part of the orchestral, instrumental and operatic repertoire remains small. In Prague, however, enthusiasm for such music knows oo bounds, and it tends to overshadow the standard

German repertoire. Given the encouragement that the state gives to contemporary composers in Czechoslovakia — the kind of official support and recognidon that Western composers dream about — there is evidently a strong desire to maintain this tradition, even if the price is limited contact with international Inevitably, the section of Korean art best represented is that of ceramics. Starting with the Three Kingdoms pots of hard gray unglazed clay, the show continues with United Silla dynasty (668-935) wares, which were influenced by the Tang pottery of China. After these are the wares of the Koryo dynasty (918-1392) which saw, in the 10th and 11th centuries, the advent of Korean celadons. These received approval in 1157 by the king, who commissioned celadon roof tiles for an ornamental pavilion in the grounds of the royal palace. Examples of these tiles, though oot in the present show, are recorded by G. St. G. Gomperz in his monograph "Korean Celadon and Other Wares of the Koryo Period," as having been recovered by archaeologists in 1964.

there are too many passages where not even Smetana's warm-blooded orchestration can hide a lack of inspi-

A Burgundian in New York

By Michael Gibson International Herald Tribune

PARIS — Seven years ago Alain Kirili, 38, (a native of Burgundy, an old province of France marked by a full-bodied, sensuous culture). was a young sculptor impressed and no doubt rather intimidated by the stern and triumphant minimalism of American art, Sol LeWitt, Carl André and others. Under that influence he produced spare sculptures made of straight, stainlesssteel wire that could fairly be described as austere.

But seven years ago, too, Kirili moved to New York, where he found a studio downtown, on White Street, and in due course a dealer (Beana Sonnabend) who tonk an interest in his work. Now he is back in Paris on a visit, for his first show here since he moved, a rotund, lively man bubbling with insights acquired over the years. The intimidation that he originally felt in presence of contemporary American art - it struck him then as a sort of absolute formula-tion of modernity — has given way to a friendly understanding of its connection with the mentality of the country that produced it. He discovered that the austerity of minimalism was not the rational absolute it seemed to be, viewed from the far side of the ocean, but that it was rooted in the austerity of a fundamentally puritan mentality - the typical example of this being the work of David Smith, whose otles themselves seem to confirm such an interpretation.

"You've got to be tough!" young New York artists were constantly telling him, "or you'll never make it!" Toughness was not exactly what characterized an artist in his view. But this, as he sees it, was a direct expression of specifically American notions of virility and femininity that he was also discovering then and which, be says, find such a impressive expression in American art. Kirili's reaction to New York was enthusiastic, for one thing because the move allowed him to discover his own "Frenchness" and lifted him out of the provincialism that comes, not from belonging to a place, but from being unaware of what such a belonging implies. To-day he feels that he has understood the strong work done in the United States since the 1950s and he is no longer intimidated by it. He has, on the contrary, found a way to give expression to his own roots in a contemporary idiom, although it was not easy, he says, to gain accep-plained, presents the mother as a repressive authority. This also, in Kirili's view, constitutes an additional barrier that American artists have to overcome.

His own art, while still marked by his early minimalism, now clearly allows itself to have some of the laboo qualities he mentioned. There is a clear "cultural" reference in his hammered, folded and indented beams of iron that stand vertically on an iron base. The in-dentations near the top of the bar often create the profile of a hooded figure and seem to refer to the 16th-century Burgundian marble sculptures of mourning figures draped in black that surround several famous tombs.

Some sculptures (not on view in Paris) refer explicitly to Burgun-dy's indigenous form of austerity, the great monastic movements of the Middle Ages that had their seat esque cathedral of Autun, Kirili is back in time.

tension between the theoretical demands of an intellectual austerity and the exigencies of a deep sensuality, a certain passion for his material, and his works appear like traces of an endless itinerary between the two. The interest of the event resides in part in the unusual confrontation between two mentalities that it reflects.

Sensuality, in the sense used above and particularly in connection with gender, is also rather for-eign to the New York mentality, he says, and is sometimes considered rather French, with implications of self-indulgent oddness. None of this appears to bother him, however, and such observations are made in a tone of jovial and sensitive robustness (he flushes easily in moments of enthusiasm or pleasure). Kirili is happy about his move and finds New York a place with a tremendous capacity for receiving the vast and useful mass of unmemorable work, the indispensable compost, in his opinion, that allows work of superior quality to emerge. This in itself explains, in his view, the vitality of American art today. And how does the Paris art scene strike him, returning after a long absence? "Too tame and cautious!" he says with a cordial laugh. The reflection does not refer to the art being produced here, but 10 the social climate that he considers deau, during his long tenure in Canada, was an event that never happened. Quebec never se-ceded from the country, and Canada never broke into independent fragments. ft could have happened very easily at any of several points in the 1970s, when Quebec nationalism was strongly on the rise. If Canada had had a less skillful and less determined prime minister, perhaps it would have happened.

Mr. Trudeau now takes his leave with the satisfaction of knowing that the threat of separatism is not likely to revive. It was generated in the special circumstances of a political awakening in French Canada, and national legislation on language and civil rights has met some of the French Canadians' grievances. A separatist government came to power in Que-bec itself, enacted much legislation there, and four years ago pushed the question of sover-eignty to a referendum. The people of Quebec voted against it by a substantial majority, and the idea has never regained much momentum. On the contrary, a slow drift of businesses and investment away from the province, reflecting political uncertainty, has reminded voters there of the price that separation would exact in terms of jnbs and incomes.

Canada's next prime minister will have to undertake a different kind of national reconciliation. In his long struggle to hold English and French Canada together, Mr. Trudeau resorted in tactics that frequently divided east from west. He sought to bind together the two most heavily populated provinces, Quebec and Ontario, and to build his parliamentary majnrity on his Liberal Party's strength there.

That frequently meant policies that favored urban populations and industrial economies. And it evoked resentment elsewhere, particularly in the west. In all of the vast expanse from the western edge of Ontario to the Pacific, Liberals currently hold only two seats.

In political careers it is often true that the triumphs fade while the setbacks and wounds are cumulative. Mr. Trudeau has been prime minister of Canada for an extraordinarily long time - since 1968, with one brief interruption. There have been five American presidents in the White House since he first took office. Mr. Trudeau is leaving now because all of the signs, including polls, commentary and politicians' warnings, say he cannot win the election that must be held within the year.

He has accomplished the most important part of the job that he set out to do. By announcing his resignation now he gives his party good time to choose a successor to take it into the next campaign, presumably next fall, and beyond that, to take Canada into a new stage of its political history.

A Time to Stand Off

As The Economist warns with cousinly affection, how Americans now think about the Middle East may be more important than anything they recently tried to do there. The British journal begs us not to confuse a punch on the nose with the end of the world -and to distinguish clearly between failing in Beirut and an unfailing commitment to truly vital interests like Israel and oil.

Why do Americans need such abvious advice? Because the Reagan administration, after trying to do good in Lebanon in the worst possible way, is now properly abandoning that mission in an equally clumsy manner. With his jingo friends shouting "disaster," President Reagan cannot bring himself to confess failure or to call a retreat by its proper, dignified name. Yet neither can he find much support from those on the other side, whom he called cowards for urging just such a retreat.

What is election-year sport in the United States, however, can be alarming to its allies and vastly more damaging than anything that has yet occurred

Having taken that blow on the nose, America cannot afford either Mr. Reagan's fumbling evasions or his critics' denigrations of U.S. power. He sent the marines to Lebanon for bumane and defensible reasons: to give its factions a chance to form a coalition, end a ghastly civil war and avert total domination by Syria. Now he has withdrawn them for equally numane and sensible teasons: The Lebanese feuds and Syria's influence were simply too great for the influence that the United States could prudently bring to bear. Mr. Reagan has talked foolishly but acted wisely. The reverse would have been infinitely worse. To recover his balance, be oow needs to understand that butting out of some situations can be just as firm a policy as butting in. He was comfortably clear warning Iraq and Iran against interfering with Western oil tankers in the Strait of Hormuz: "There's no way that we could allow that channel to be closed." U.S. ships have fired a few warning shots to stress the point. But what is required elsewhere is aloufness, the opposite of intervention.

Although Mr. Reagan contends that he is not finished in Lebanon and might even send the marines back, his State Department pursues the more appropriate policy. America's diplomats will cease behaving as if Lebanon's independence and order are more important to them than to the Lebanese.

The Lebanese will now either collaborate with Arab mediators to gain a bit of independence from Syria or see their nation dismembered. Partition should not disturb Washington. As Syria's influence spreads west, Israel's will be anchored in the south and the two will keep a respectful distance, as they have for several years. The remaining danger is that doing nothing more oo the Lebanese front will tempt the Reagan administration into damaging exer-tions on another. Egypt, Jordan and Saudi Arabia are already pressing for recognition of o "new" Yasser Arafat, supposedly a convert to the Reagan plan for a West Bank deal. But Israel is io shock after its Lebanon failures and not about to let a divided PLO turn the West Bank into another free-fire zone. The Reagan plan, or any Arab-Israeli accord, must oow wait for significant political changes through-out the region. The less America interferes, the faster some of those changes may occur.

Treat Manila With Care

The single issue that has most vexed American foreign policy since World War II is sharpening again, this time in respect to the Philip-pines. Should the United States hold tight to a friendly and anti-communist but exceedingly imperfect, authoritarian and vulnerable reme in the Third World? Or should it try to beat the odds favoring its eventual collapse by trying to oudge it toward o more popular, flexible and, one hopes, stable form of rule? And can the oudging process itself be kept from aggravating the very condition of instability it means to treat?

In the case of the Philippines, American policy has shown an evident care. After the opposition leader Benignn S. Aquino Jr. was assassinated last year, conceivably with at least some official complicity, President Reagan put off a long-scheduled visit to Manila, thereby denying President Ferdinand E. Marcos a much-sought show of support. Since then, 'American diplomacy has sought to reinforce Philippine efforts to restore some measure of democratic politics: by making the legislative elections planned for next May a more fit vehicle for the channeling of discontent into a political process, and by ensuring that Mr. Marcos's successor be someone accountable to the people. Washington is further undertaking to dampen the tinder by helping the Philippines deal with its anxious foreign creditors. The Philippine opposition is pushing the inquiry into the Aquino assassination, and pushing it ever closer to President Marcos's door. His adversaries are warning of the dire consequences of having him continue business as usual, or even stay in power. They are also calling on their American friends to apply more direct pressure on him through aid. The United States promised the Philippines $900 million over five years, as rent for use of major military bases. The House Foreign Affairs Committee has now voted to alter this year's mix of military and economic increments, by providing less on the military side.

The political rationale for this shift is tn distance the United States from the Marcos regime; the economic rationale is to provide more money in a category (economic grants) that the Philippines desperately needs. A skillful American diplomacy can no doubt find a certain use for this show of congressional impatience. At a point, however, bald intervention of this sort can backfire: It can make stand-patters appear tough nationalists and thus become a liability to potential reformers. The Philippines is no longer a U.S. colony. It is a sovereign country, a friendly country, with problems but also with pride.

FROM OUR MARCH 3 PAGES, 75 AND 50 YEARS AGO

1909: Washington Gears Up for Taft WASHINGTON - Judge William H. Taft's expansive smile seems even to have stopped the swishes of the "big stick." A peacemaker by nature, he has put everybody in a pleasant frame of mind for the inauguration. The signs multiply that it will be a jubilee, something akin to that which ushered in William McKinley, 12 years ago. Washington is getting a wealth of color for the celebration. Two thousands bluejackets from the fleet, who are on shore duty; the calvary, in yellow, of Troop A of Cleveland, which is to be Judge Taft's escort; the brillians uniforms of Cadets from the Southern States, all commingle within one block on Pennsylvania Avenue. Governors and their aides, the latter loaded with medals and gold braid, jostle one annther in the hntels.

1934: Newsreels Censored in Chicago CHICAGO -All scenes of mob violence and rioting, including newsreel pictures of the re-cent disorders in Paris and Vienna, have been ordered eliminated from the programs shown by Chicago theatres. This order was made at the request of Mayor Edward J. Kelly, who feared that the sight of the disturbances might incite Chicago Communists to fallow the example of their brethren across the seas. Theatre owners obeyed the orders and the scenes were eliminated, but they pointed out that the censoring order applied to the film companies rather than the exhibitors. The newsreel companies said that the order, which reached them through the police department board of cen-sorship, necessitated the editing of virtually all

Reagan Goes His Own Way on Space

NEW YORK — On Jan. 21, the U.S. Air Force successfully tested the rocketry of a new ann-satellite weapon. No, says the Reagan administration, such a treaty would not be verifiable. Yes, say numerous scien-usts and arms control experts, a treaty is feasible and advisable. But the administration is going its own way. As George Keyworth, the president's science adviser, said: "If we could conceive of a treaty with the Soviet Union that was truly verifiable ... that would be one issue. [But] it is an almost impossible thing to do in space."

This conclusion is so sharply at variance with other authorities that ening of the European leg of the alliance. This ought to be accompanied by an evolution in U.S.

The appearance in Europe of a growing oumber of European warheads is oot adverse to U.S. interests. The more independent the weapons are the greater their deterrent value. What sense would it make for the Russians to attack one side of the Atlantic if, after a lethal exchange, the forces based on the other side of the Atlantic remained untouched. The Russians would have to plan, from the outset, an all-out attack against both European and American forces, which is exactly the recipe for Mutual Assured Destruction. One cannot imagine better coupling. This problem has already been raised for the Russians by the deployment of the first Pershing-2s in Europe. It will be made even more intractable by the appearance of a growing number of European-controlled weapons.

Of course, it will create problems within the alliance, between Washington, Paris and London, but also among the Europeans. It would be wrong

Office this easily concealabla weapon is operational, the Russians could have little confidence in their whiley to verify a han on its deploywould withdraw the draft treaty they have already offered at the United Nations and would pro-ceed in the old familiar arms race pattern, to try in match the superior U.S. weapon.

That is why now is the time — before the U.S. weapon's heat-seek-ing warhead has been proved in tests scheduled later this year — for the United States to accept the So-viet challenge put by Yuri Andro-pov last August for a moratorium on anti-satellite testing. Negotia-tions for a treaty banning such weapons could follow. But the Reagan administration appears dead set against this course.

The main reason probably is not the Soviet threat, minor as it is, or the utility of the U.S. weapon, for which the federation believes there are limited targets, or even the de-sire to outdo the Russians; rather, the administration's eberished Space Defense Initiative (the socalled Star Wars missile defense) includes ground-based laser and space-based surveillance systems, both of which are technically antisatellite weapons. Thus a treaty banning anti-satellite weapons probably would ban important parts of the Star Wars scheme.

Fortunately, the Air Force can-not proceed with the crucial test of the U.S. anti-satellite weapon, pitting it against a target in space, until the administration certifies to Congress that it is engaged in a "good faith" effort to negotiate limitations oo such weapons with the Soviet Union. Since not even token negotiations are now planned, Mr. Reagan's ability to evade this re-quirement of the 1984 Defense Authorization Bill may well determine whether outer space, too, will be engulfed in earthly folly.

Gary Hart's 'New Ideas' — You've Heard Them Before

All these candidates have been more liberal on cultural and foreign issues than other Democrats, and more conservative on economics; all have had particular appeal to the young affluent voters of the baby boom. You might call them the Trend Democrats. As their showings in presidential primaries for 16 years indicate, there is a healthy market for such candidates in primaries against what might be called Traditional Democrats, who are typically conservative on cultural and foreign issues and more willing to spend injury

The continued success of Trend candidates spotlights the well-known problem of Traditional Democrats: in an affluent nation, more and more voters see themselves as those who pay for generous government pro-grams rather than those who benefit from them. And more and more people, especially the young, are interest-ed in liberating themselves from the restraints of traditional mores rather than bonoring them.
But does the Trend program work

any better as a way of governing?
That question is raised not only by the failure of candidacies such as those of Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Brown, but also by the inability of the Carter administration to govern successfully. After two and a half years in office, the best the Carter presidency could come up with was a procla-mation of "malaise" — inspired in large part by the pollster Parrick Caddell, who is now advising Mr. Hart.

This restatement of the malaise theme misses the fact that confidence in U.S. political institutions and poliin U.S. position institutions and poli-ticians is rising, not falling: whatever else you may think about Ronald Reagan, he has proved that politi-cians can make a difference. Malaise may help an outsider candidate win primaries in the out party. But it will not help him govern.

The second danger of Trend Democratic politics is that it can easily degenerate into a politics of selfishness rather than generosity, of libera-tion rather than obligation. Mr. Hart's program would cut deficits without raising taxes greatly, except on a seemingly small number of rich people — no terrible burden on the vast affluent middle class, thank you. We are to solve foreign problems without U.S. intervention in Lebanon or Grenada or Central America. or just about anywhere else — no need to draft anyone, you see. This is an exaggeration of Mr. Hart's policies — but not by all that much. Like other politicians, he promises painless solution for all the country's ills. A case can be made that Trend politics reflects the desire of an unprecedently affluent and well-educated generation to avoid being drafted in a war and to avoid the con-straints of traditional mores —and to enjoy at the same time congratula-tions for their moral courage. Will that inspire a nation?

Mr. Hart could answer, with some justice, that the politics of others is more selfish: that Ronald Reagan is out to help the rich get richer and Walter Mondale to help the wellplaced members of the AFL-CIO and National Education Association enjoy their advantages at the expense of the rest of the nation.

But Mr. Reagan can articulate a vision of a nation that stands for freedom and abundance—not a bad reading of American history. And Mr. Mondale can appeal to a tradi-tion of helping the helpless and enabling those born without advantages to make their way up in the world. Can Mr. Hart claim that his politics would provide as much incentive to the rich or as much help to the poor? The third danger of Trend politics the talks should include all Soviet weapons that the talks should include all Soviet weapons that can hit European territory; and that there should be o European contingent alongside the U.S. delegation. The European party should comprise British, French and West German negotiators, the is more tactical: that it invites terrible disappointment when it is revealed, as it usually is, that the politician who is preaching this new gospel has feet of clay. Consider the reaction when George McGovern dumped Thomas Eagleton, or when Jimmy Carter started getting snarled in contradic-tions. Gary Hart proudly proclaims his support for free trade and his opposition to the so-called domestic content bill sought by the AFL-CIO. But not so long ago, before it was clear the unions would endorse Walter Mondale, Mr. Hart was waffling uncomfortably on this issue. Or consider Central America. He now is a strong opponent of U.S. intervention in any form. Yet in an interview with The Washington Post in 1982 he wobbled all over on the issue. Better things can be said for Mr.

Hart's record. He notably refused to play the demagogue on the nuclear power issue during the Three Mile Island crisis when, as chairman of a critical subcommittee, he could easily have done so - and won points with many young Americans. He has pro-posed a nuclear freeze on plutonium and a creative job-training program. (These may not prove practical, but they do address key problems: the danger of nuclear proliferation, and the need to upgrade the skills of the large number of people who entered the labor force in low-skill jobs in the late 1970s.) His proposals for military reform are specific and interesting.

For the moment, the focus is not on these problems but on the tactics of campaigning. Dovish Iowa and tight-fisted New Hampshire are hos-pitable to Trend candidates, but the politics of Democratic primary voters in states such as Illinois and Pennsyl-vania is almost entirely Traditional Nor has there ever been a market for Trend candidates (unless you count Mr. Carter) in the South. But the question now is not whether Mr. Hart's tactics will work - wt will see soon enough — but whether his particular brand of Trend politics is capable of providing good government. If not, the Democrats might do better to choose the more Traditional politics of Walter Mondale.

BRUSSELS — General Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Polish leader, has just won a rare, but real, victory in the war he has been waging against the Polish people since Dec. 13, 1981. He carried the day without a fight, and against one of the bastions best protected against his assaults: the Church of St. Joseph in Ursus, an industrial suburb of Warsaw, in a parish that is one of the strongest redoubts of the Solidarity union. Until now, Poles have always taken advantage of the relative immunity of the church to express their patriotic feelings and their rejection of the Communist system. But a protest last month at the church in Ursus was aimed at the primate of Poland himself. Cardinal losses Clarge.

self, Cardinal Jozef Glemp.
Father Mieczyslaw Nowak, the priest of St. Joseph's parish, had been removed at the request of Cardinal Glemp and reassigned to a remote parish in Leki Koscielne, 100 kilometers (62 miles) away. This provoked a hunger strike at St. Joseph's, and sympathy with the cause was ex-pressed in many parts of the country. Father Nowak is a leader of the 69 "priest-political extremists" who authorities say have taken an overtly pro-Solidarity stand, a group the government has asked the primate to "normalize."

"normanze.

Cardinal Glemp's handling of the situation was widely criticized by Catholics who said he was too quick in giving in to the government.
The primate's defenders say that

Cardinal Glemp, under great govern-ment pressure, may have hoped that by sacrificing Father Nowak be could spare the other priests on the list of 69, and particularly the government's two principal targets — Father Hen-ryk Jankowski, the chaplain of the Gdansk shipyards and a friend of Lech Walesa, and Father Jerzy Po-pieluszko, a popular Warsaw priest who was briefly detained in December after authorities said they had found explosives in his apartment. Cardinal Glemp is also said to have believed that the reassignment of Father Nowak might help protect delicate negotiations with the government. These talks deal with the re-lease of political prisoners, the grant-risk was clearly a political issue.

Father Luigi Poggi, the pope's itin-erant muncio, who is responsible for contacts with the Polish government, was in Warsaw when the Nowak affair broke out. Some observers believe that the primate consulted the nuncin before acting. Cardinal Glemp hinted as much when he declared during his trip to Brazil that be was awaiting an invitation to Moscow, where he would go as the pope's special envoy to establish relations between the Vatican and East Euro-Dean states.

These explanations dn not satisfy the primate's critics. They lament the timing of his announcement, made on the plane to Latin America. He was not present to face the anti-cleri-cal rebellion that ensued.

Cardinal Glemp, the critics add, made a poor choice of sites for a concession to the regime. Ursus is

And he was with them during the dark period of the state of war. Father Nowak was harassed by the police on several occasions for his "nonorthodox" sermons, and for having welcomed to his church pro-fessors not allowed to speak elsewhere about the history and development of the nation.

Poles were particularly put off by Cardinal Glemp's attempt to justify his decision. "It is at the request of Father No-wak and it means o promotion for him," the primate declared. Father Nowak's new parish is much smaller than the one in Ursus.

The hunger strike in the Ursus

Nowak affair. This open conflict between the primate and his faithful weakens the nation's spiritual unity; for the regime, it is the best and most unexpected of gifts.

While fearing an open split, many Poles will have trouble forgetting the Nowak affair, especially in light of earlier gestures by the primate: his disavowal of "political priests" and his description of Solidarity declarations as "un-Christian and spicidal."

tions as "un-Christian, and suicidal." The pope is following the primate's actions closely. It is no coincidence that during the Ursus affair he told a group of pilgrims to the Vatican that "the glorious name of Solidarity is now part of the Polish soul." He made that statement in private, but it letter criticized the primate as being far too lenient toward the regime.

But the problem goes beyond the Nowak affair. This open conflict be-was repeated by Vatican radio — and it was repeated in Polish. International Herald Tribune.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

On Military Competence

I strongly oppose the tenet of Jef-frey Record's analysis, "The U.S. Military: Guilty of Professional Incompetence? (Feb. 19 and 20). I would have put the question under the headline, "U.S. Policy-Makers: Guilty of Professional Incompetence?" In my view, the string of the competence? The professional string of the competence? disappointments provided by the U.S. military from Kores to Lebanon is based on an inadequate under-so asset on an inacequate under-standing of the military by the U.S. political leadership.

The classic example is Vietnam.
On the day regular North Vietnamese fighters were first spotted in South Vietnam, a political decision by the White House was due: Either to leave the South Vietnamese theater, or to enter North Vietnam and to linish

Instead, the leadership decided to expose a civilized nation's army, bound to a command structure, war conventions and other rules, to the guerrilla tactics of the enemy in a hioreign environment. In Lebanon it would not have been much different.

To blame the military for the fact that a relative handful of dug-in and fired-upon marines — deployed to create an atmosphere of stability and confidence — achieved as little as the full scale of diplomacy in the region, is simply the wrong way to deal with the problem.

Mr. Reagan has restored confidence in American resolve and pro-jected American leadership on three fronts: arms control, no-nonsense intolerance of Soviet aggression, and an open world economy

By all leading indicators (except perhaps the deficit), he should win in November. Against Walter Mondale, a victory is more than likely; fewer than four in ten Mondale backers believe that their man can beat Mr. Reagan, according to a Washington Post-ABC poll last month.

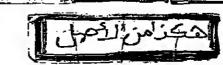

But there is a roundbouse punch waiting: Gary Hart. While Mr. Moo-dale is exhausted and John Glenn is reeling. Mr. Hart is threatening to become the Jimmy Carter of 1984.

He has done well in Iowa and New Hampshire. As George McGovern's 1972 campaign manager, he is likely to receive Mr. McGovern's support when that towel is thrown in.

Worse, Mr. Hart is electable. Is would meet and beat Mr. Reagan of Mr. Glem). He could saddle up by side Mr. Reagan as a Westerner. He is the one Democrat with a claim vision — a young remake of lack Kennedy who could solidity in Democratic party and come of swinging against Mr. Reagan's personal ideology. Lambsdorff Sees 2 Dangers Growing Out of U.S. Policy

By LEONARD SILK

EW YORK — Otto Lambsdorff, West Germany's economics minister, is in the United States, laying the groundwork for a meeting Monday between Chancel-lor Helmut Kohl and President Ronald Reagun In an interview in New York, Mr. Lambsdorff made clear that his government is deeply concerned over the harmful effects of U.S. economic policies on his country and many others. He sees two risks stemming from big budget deficits and high interest rates in the United States.

The first is a threat out to West Germany directly but to the developing countries of Latin America Africa and Asia. "They are our clients," Mr. Lambsdorff said. "Our capital goods exports have been weakened, and the developing countries cannot buy capital equipment if their financial position is worsened." He the I hird world countries were bound to increase if U.S. domestic policies kept interest rates high and rising.

His second big worry is over the "growing protectionist tendency in the United States." He sees this as being linked to high interest rates, which he said had made the dollar overly strong, undermining the U.S. trade position and costing the United States hundreds of thousands of jobs. He fears that protectionism will spread, here and abroad, if the United States does not set its fiscal house in order fiscal house in order.

But Mr. Lambsdorff conceded that the extra-strong dollar had been an immediate blessing to the German economy. As noted in the latest issue of the monthly report of the Bundesbank, his country's central bank, West German exporters have profited from the strong economic revival in the United States and "from the fact that their products have been priced very attractively for the strong burners are results of the learner place of the strong economic revival in the United States and "from the fact that their products have been priced very attractively for foreign buyers as a result of the lower valuation of the Demsche mark against important world currencies, particularly the United

Mr. Lambsdorff criticized the Reagan administration and, even more strongly, Congress for yielding to protectionist pressures, especially in the steel sector, as a false and dangerous solution to the trade problem. He warned that the United States is courting retaliation from Europe and he urged positive steps to regain a more "outward-looking" attitude through international Relations between the United States and West Germany have also been strained over U.S. criticism of what it considers an imadequate contribution by Europeans to their own defense. Mr.

Lambsdorff sharply opposed suggestions — made recently by Lawrence S. Eagleburger, the deputy undersecretary of state for political affairs, and Henry A. Kissinger, former secretary of state — that the United States should release this military forces in Europe if the West Germans and others did not spend more on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Mr. Lambsdorff said he considered Mr. Kissinger's proposal that the next commander of NATO forces be a European and the next secretary-general of NATO be an American as just "making a show." But Chancellor Kohl, disturbed by the critical signals emanating from Washington, is likely to try to reassure Mr. Reagan during his White House visit that he and President François Mitterrand of France intend to bolster their cooperation with the United States and their military self-defense,

The economics minister has a self-defense problem of his own.

He has been accused of taking a bribe in the form of a $50,000 contribution for his political party, the Free Democratic Party, from the Flick holding company in exchange for tax waivers of $175,000 on some of its foreign operations.

Mr. Lamhsdorff acknowledged that Flick had made the contribution and that the tax break had been granted to Flick. (It has since been withdrawn.) But he said there was no connection between the two actions that the money was "never given to me"

between the two actions, that the money was "never given to me" and that there is no evidence against him except that his name was on a list found in Flick's offices.

In the interview, Mr. Lambsdorff maintained his innocence and "good conscience," and he said he intended to "fight my way through." But if he is indicted, as expected, in May or June, he will probably be compelled to resign to defend himself in court.

Mr. Kohl has assigned Mr. Lambsdorff to the crucial effort to strengthen relations with Washington and, at the same time, demonstrate that West Germany is not a humble or pliant vassal of the United States. In doing so, Mr. Kohl appears to be trying to strengthen his economics minister's position — and his own.

Car Plan By Warren Brown

Daewoo,

GM Set

. Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON — General Motors Corp. and Daewoo Corp., a South Korean conglomerate, tentatively bave agreed to produce small cars in South Korea for export to the United States, industry sources

Formal announcement of the greement could come as early as Friday, the sources said.

Daewoo and GM equally own Daewoo Motor Co., South Korea's second-largest automaker. Under the agreement, Daewoo Motor would build about 200,000 frontwheel-drive cars annually, and about half of them would be shipped to this country.

Neither GM officials nor officials at Daewoo Corp.'s North American headquarters in New York would comment on the record about the plan. But sources in both camps acknowledged that an agreement in principle has been reached, and that GM and Daewoo officials were working on final

The agreement would give Daewoo Motor an entree to the lucrative North American auto market, where South Korea's largest auto maker. Hyundai Motor Co., already has a presence. Hyun-dai last December began selling its four-door, rear-wheel-drive Hyundai Pony passenger cars in Canada. The arrangement would give GM another inexpensive supply of cars to fight the small-car wars at home. GM officials have said they need an annual supply of at least 1 million small cars to ensure their company's presence in that seg-ment of the U.S. market. But they say they don't have the time, the money — or the expertise — to go it alone in developing, building and selling that many small cars for U.S. consumption.

GM, as a result, has adopted a so-called Japanese strategy which might now be called its Asian strategy. GM and Japan's Toyota Motor Corp. — under an agreement subject to linal approval by the Federal Trade Commission plan to build as many as 250,000 small cars annually at a former GM plant in Fremont, California. The GM-Toyota cars would be sold under the Chevrolet nameplate. GM also has import arrangements with its Japanese partners — It said durable goods orders were.

U.S. Firms Are Limiting Inventories

By Winston Williams New York Times Service

CHICAGO - If the customary rhythms of the U.S. business cycle held sway today, manufacturers and retailers would be ordering more materials than they need just yet and turning out more widgets than they can sell right away. Inventory building, a usually follows closely behind re-vived consumer spending, would be rolling into high gear. But buyers, production man-agers and accountants are apparently out of sync with historical patterns. After more than a year of economic recovery, no substantial inventory building has occurred, although coosumer spending is still buoyanı and factory production is rising ro-

Many companies are doggedly adhering to a new self-discipline on inventories made possible by computers and forced on them by recession. The possibility of missing some sales because of inadequate supplies hardly di-minishes the determination.

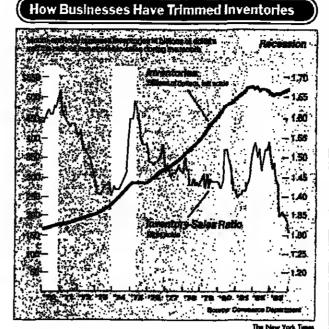

That means the economy may not get as much of a kick as it usually does from inventory rebuilding.

Economists regard the level of inventories as a crucial economic indicator, often referring to stockpiles as "the tail that wags the dog." The shifting attitude on inventories, they say, por-tends even deeper changes for the U.S. economy.

A more disciplined approach to holding materials could make future recessions less severe because manofacturers and retailers, faced with a drop in sales, would have fewer "excess inventories" to work off. Sparse inven-tories could also reduce pressure on interest rates by cutting the borrowing needs of business.

Whatever the benefits or costs to the economy, companies have decided that leaner inventories mean fatter profits, and programs to trim stockpiles are proliferating across the United

And the change seems permaoent. Inventory managers could our return to their old ways even if they wanted to. Advancing echnology, like electronic cash registers that make inventory adjustments as sales are rung up, have thrust retailers into another era. So has the high cost of stocking shelves. agement as much as anything because production is rising," said Harry Geller, manager of production scheduling at General Electric's Appliance Park in Louisville, Kentucky. "Our goal is to improve the availability of our products and we will probably do it with less inventory.

The theme cuts across industry lines. "We're not in business to stock inventories." said John Gailys, executive vice president of the Dallas-based Neiman-Marcus retail chain, "We're concentrating on keeping a flow of current merchandise to our

Japanese Banks Weigh Investments in U.S. Lending Market

By William Chapman Washington Post Service

TOKYO - Recent U.S. acquisitions by Japanese banks are the tip of a wave that will bring other large financial investments to U.S. shores in the near future, banking experts bere believe.

Affoat in large cash reserves, bungry for new customers and facing waning domestic loan demand, major Japanese banks are shifting their sights to the U.S. lending mar-

"The environment is changing here oow and we have to find new markets," said Masayuki Oku, deputy general manager of internationplanning at Sumitomo Bank Ltd., which is considering a major U.S. investment. "We have to find a more prosperous market that has

For Sumitomo and other banks, the initial target is the mid-sized U.S. corporation that they believe has great borrowing potential. Some, however, have other goals.

CONCORD, New Hampshire
—While Republicans hailed an organized write-in effort for President Ronald Reagan on New Hampshire's Democratic ballot, final vote counts showed Senator MEXICO CITY — Mexico has started paying 32 billion pesos ($188 million) in interest to former Gary Hart of Colorado got a higher percentage of write-ins from Republican voters.

Mr. Reagan got the highest number of write-ins — 5,056 — in Tuesday's Democratic primary and garnered 97 percent of the regular Republican vote. But Mr. Hart, the winger on the Democratic side with shareholders in its nationalized banks.

The payment, the first under a reimbursement program, was begun Thursday for the first group of banks for which substitution bonds worth 312 billion pesos were issued. The interest covered the first six months after the program was decreed in 1982.

The government has also promised to sell most of the banks stakes in hundreds of private companies involved in the nationaliza-Republican vote. But Mr. Hart, the winner on the Democratic side with 39 percent of the vote; received 3,968 write-ins from Republicans. Mr. Reagan's write-ins represented about 5 percent of the 101,129 Democrats who voted in Tuesday's primary. Senator Hart's write-ins represented more than 5.2 percent of the 75,494 Republicans who voted. "New Hampshire does this all the time," Secretary of State William Gardner said. "We have a very simple ballot. It's very easy to write in people. I think it's a healthy part of the election process."

IBM Cuts Price Of PC in Europe

New York Times Service NEW YORK — Interna-tonal Business Machines Corp. said it had reduced the price of its Personal Computer by as much as 30 percent in Europe, bringing the cost of the machines more in line with U.S.

A spokesman said that Thursday's reductions "reflect improved manufacturing costs achieved as a result of the full commissioning of the European manufacturing plant for both the Personal Computer and the Personal Computer XT at Greenock, Scotland." The XT is a more sophisticated model, including a high-capacity, hard-disk drive. The company said XT prices were cut as much as

Seoul Bankers Dubious About Legal Changes

By Moon Ihlwan

SEOUL — The government has introduced changes in the banking system in response to recent multimillion-dollar business scandals. but industry sources are not sure the changes will be effective. The steps the Seoul government has so far taken focus more on form than substance, one foreign banker said.

President Chun Doo Hwan's chief economic adviser, Sakong II. said this week that the government was committed to the changes, especially to control lending on the unofficial "curb market."

Finance Ministry officials concede that, during South Korea's economic drive of the past 20 years, fast-developing manufacturing industries benefitted at the expense of the financial sector, with government planners regulating banks to provide key export projects with loans at artificially low rates.

The ministry now says it will let bank shareholders participate in decision-making and permit independent selection of bank employ-

Industry sources say, however, that the most difficult problems South Korean banking faces are corruption, bureaucratic inefficiency and the clandestine curb market, the chief causes of persistent

In the latest of a series of scandals, 29 persons, including the former head of the Cho Heung bank and 17 other bank officials, were sentenced this week to up to 15 years for illegally issuing promissory notes valued at more than $200 million.

In December, 22 persons, including a former cabinet minister, eight government officials and the head of the Myung Sung group, were convicted in a similar scandal involving the Commerce Bank of Korea, and in 1982 a curb market scheme sent several companies to the brink of bankruptcy. In a bid to rid South Korea of such schemes, Mr. Chun's government has introduced a law setting a maximum penalty of death for bank officials convicted of taking bribes of more than 20 million won ($25,150). People making more than 5 billion won through fraud, embezzlement or breach of trust could also face death.

The ministry said the scandals were due partly to insufficient bank supervision, so the Office of Bank Supervision and Examination, a watchdog body, was strengthened and made independent of the central bank. Other changes in the banking structure include the transfer of ownership of five city banks into private hands and creation of two new city banks, one a joint venture with the Bank of

To prevent bank branches from becoming go-betweens for private moneylenders and to bring capital from the unofficial market into banking channels, a law was passed in December banning anonymous accounts and those held under assumed names, starting in 1986.

Until then, bolders of such accounts will have to pay higher income tax than those with accounts under their real names Government officials call the measures revolutionary, but many foreign bankers say market mechanisms, not government, should be allowed to control the industry.

"To vitalize the banking industry, you need more drastic measures, such as liberalizing bank rates," one foreign banker said. The government, which sets the rates, is not likely to give up this control soon, as the tightness of capital would send interest rates soaring, ruining the government's top-priority policy of minimizing inflation, industry sources said.

BP Planning to Sell 6.4% Stake in Amax

By Bob Hagerry

LONDON — British Petroleum Co. said on Friday that it plans to sell its 6.4-percent stake in Amax Inc., the loss-plagued U.S. minerals company, in a transaction likely to exceed $100 million. BP is required to sell the stake by a 1981 agreement with the U.S. Federal Trade Commission. That agreement gives Amax, which had a loss of $489 million last year, the right of first refusal.

Amax has 60 days to decide whether to accept the BP offer. A spokesman said the company is considering the matter.

If Amax does not accept the offer. BP said it intends to sell the shares either to Standard Oil Co. of California, which already has a 19.5-percent shareholding in Amax, or to Salomon Brothers Inc., the New York investment bank.

A Socal spokesman confirmed that the company may buy the BP stake, which would raise Socal's stake, which would raise Socal's stake to about 26 percent. But he said Socal does not intend to raise its stake much beyond that level.

BP said its stake, totaling 4.3 million shares, would be sold to Socal at the average stock market price over a 30-day period, subject to certain conditions. If those conditions were not met and Socal ditions were not met and Socal declined to buy the shares, BP would sell them to Salomon.

Amax shares rose 75 cents apiece Friday on the New York Stock Ex-change, closing at $26.625. At that level, the BP stake would total about $116 million, and Amax's entire share capital would be val-ued at around $1.8 billion.

BP recently lost an appeal to the U.S. government to overturn the requirement that the stake be sold. he FTC agreement dates from the 1981 purchase of Kennecott Corp. by Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), 53 per-cent of which is owned by BP. Because both Amax and Kennecott are major producers of molybde-num, the government has insisted that BP cannot hold an interest in both companies. Socal bought its Amax stake in 1975. In 1982, the oil company proposed a merger, but Amax's board vetoed the idea. One leading New York mineral-share analyst said that Socal recently has conceded privately that the purchase of a large stake in Amax was "a gross mistake" and that the oil company has sought to sell the shares. Analysis doubted that the accord with BP had any bearing on Socal's possible interest in acquir-ing Gulf Oil Corp. THE DEATH OF CHE GUEVARA

T T is a bold and ambitious project that Jay Cantor

L has undertaken in his unusual first novel, "The Death of Che Guevara" — to reconstruct the career of the Argentine-born revolutionary out of historical documents, the overwhelming majority of which the author has invented. But as early as page five of the oearly 600-page story, the narrator — or, more precisely, the intelligence that presides over the construction of the narration - calls our attention to one of the book's more fundamental problems.

in which there are recorded certain major develop-ments that have occurred between 1927 and 1966 in the worldwide struggle between communism and irony, "(No longer able to locate the hero in this movie, one twists uncomfortably in one's seat)."

Well, that was a little premature for this reader who wasn't quite yet getting restless for lack of a hero. But it wasn't more than a couple of hundred pages later that I began to experience the faral symptoms, not so much for lack of a hero as for anyone or anything to be truly interested in. Certainly it wasn't any of the spear carriers who surround the mooumental figure of Guevara — not even Fidel Castro or Régis Debray, both of whom are presented in a somewhat morally ambiguous light, or Che Guevara's parents, who, while extremely interesting, are swept off stage rather early in the going.

As for Che Guevara himself, Cantor, being an obviously sophisticated student of history, has tak-en great care to lay the psychological foundation for his hero's fanatic revolutionary character. He portrays him as a hysterical asthmatic (perhaps the result, if asthma can ever be said to have psychologi-cal roots, of an early traumatizing desertion by his mother), as well as the victim of violent Oedipal feelings that have been aggravated by his mother's seductiveness and his father's competitiveness.

Some readers, of course, may find considerable appeal in this portrait of the man who was, after all, the charismatic revolutionary figure of the 1960s, and may follow with sympathy his endless and frustrating struggle to persuade the poor and ignorant of Bolivia that they represent an international revolutionary vanguard whose interests are reflected by Vietnam's so-called struggle against imperialism. There are even touches of comedy in some of the scenes where Guevara tests the blade of his ideology against the stones of ancient Inca supersti-

But the appeal of Cantor's Guevara is finally a matter of taste and temperament. In a concluding section, also called "Dates," the revolutionary theorist Debray analyzes revolutionary conflict as follows: "It is oot individuals who are placed face to face in these battles, but class interests and ideas; but those who fall in them, those who die, are persons, are men. We cannot avoid this contradiction, escape from this pain." Some readers of "The Death of Che Guevara" will be more susceptible to

The documents that form "The Death of Che Guevara" have mostly been invented, they represent the end product of artistic activity, and therefore, instead of inviting us to select and create, they force us to accept them in a comparatively passive state of mind. To put it more blumby, they impel the mind to wander. One of the places it wanders is to the irresistible conclusion that Cantor has been infected by such covelists as James Joyce and Her-man Melville.

Scotland Seeks a Triple Crown Irish Game Could End 46 Years of Rugby Frustration

By Bob Donahue

International Herald Tribane PARIS -- Only France, Scotland and England remain in contention for this year's Five Nations rugby title after the first three of the annual round-robin tournament's five rounds. If Saturday's fourth round goes as expected. France will kill England's title hopes in Paris.

In Dublin, to quote from an ag-gressive whiskey ad, it will be "Irish on the one hand. Scotch on the other." The Irish advertisement goes on to claim victory in a "simple test." More likely in the rugby test is victory for Jim Aitken's Scots - in which event, the title and also the grand slam (a fourmatch sweep) will be at stake when France plays in Edinburgh on March 17

The Dublin match has the added interest of offering Scotland its first triple crown — a sweep against three British Isles teams — since 1938. The Scots opened with a 15-9 defeat of Wales in Cardiff on Jan. 2t and beat England, 18-6, in Edin-burgh on Feb. 4. After sitting out the third Saturday they are favorites to leave Ireland at the bottom of the standings with four losses.

The so-called triple crown does not exist physically as a trophy but has existed as a competition among the four British Isles rugby communities since the 1880s. It survived as a four-team tournament within the Five Nations tournament after France's arrival on the international scene in 1906.

There have been 16 triple crown winners since World War II: Wales nine times, England four and Ireland three. (France has beaten three British Isles teams in the same season 14 times during that perihand, Scotch in the other. Meanwhile, a feature of this year's play has been the failure of England and Irdand to score tries. Worse, England's backs have managed only one try since March 1982. French backs have amassed 24 tries in the two years.

The goal-kicking of Dusty Hare - who now sets an English cureer record against major countries with his 20th appearance at fullback is one English argument. The scrummaging of 230-pound prop Phil Blakeway and the lineout jumping of 6-foot-7 lock Steve Bainbridge are others. Rain, forecast as a possibility in a blustery cold spell, could be another.

But France seems to be on an upward curve. Confidence has grown during an unbeaten streak that started against Australia and Romania in the fall and continued with a 25-12 defeat of Ireland in Paris on Jan. 21 and a 21-16 victory over Wales on Feb. 18. That was France's first success in Cardiff since 1968, but celebrating was restrained by determination to stay fit enough for the grand slam.

Pierre Dospital, a Basque weight-lifting champion, has been brought back to prop against Blakeway. On Thursday the forwards devoted two training sessions almost entirely to lineouts. A common view is that England cannot win unless it starves France of possession. But Wales managed it in Cardiff and lost anyhow.

That was largely the doing of 22vear-old Jean-Patrick Lescarboura. His 34 points from kicks in two matches - each time equaling the Begu and fullback Serge Blanco. Their try record has been modest lately - two scored at the start ngainst Ireland and only one against Wales - but in both matches they were reined in as captain Jean-Pierre Rives opted to protect a lead and minimize risks in the second half. In Cardiff, especially, they demonstrated in the process that they are an effective defensive unit as well.

Young English fans added an intangible factor to a complex rugby formula when they rampaged in Paris before and after Wednesday night's France-England soccer match. (England lost, 2-0.t Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher called it "appalling." Mayor Jacques Chirae of Paris said Friday he was "fed up with British fans." All this acrimony could increase French ar-dor and English inhibition in the rugby forwards' battle for possession of the ball Saturday.

Two of world rugby's most popular players will be close to the end of parallel international careers Saturday, Rives and Peter Wheeler. England's hooker and captain. started in the same match, England vs. France at Twickenham in 1975. Rives, 31, does not plan to go on France's tour of New Zealand in June: Wheeler, 35, has declared himself unavailable for England's planned tour of South Africa.

VIENNA (UPI) - Karl Schranz, a former world downhill champion, has been proposed as new manager for the Austrian national ski team as a resul, of Austria's failure to win a gold medal at last month's Winter Olympic Games in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia. Andreas Steiner, president of the Tyrolean Ski Federation, suggested

The Browning of Arizona

By Iver Peterson New York Times Service

D HOENIX, Arizona - After years of worry, Arizona is try-ing to do something no other parched Western state has ever tried to do before: Stop using water faster than it is replaced by nature. Making that decision in a region whose water philosophy for 100 years has been to "get it, use it and worry about it later" was a milestone. Managing to make it work will be another.

The Groundwater Management Act, passed in 1980, set the broad goal of cutting the state's per capita water consumption in half by 2025, mainly by reducing agricultural and horticultural consumption.

Per capita water use in Arizona varies widely from one area to another. Residents of Phoenix, who draw water from the Salt River project, consume 267 gal-lons (about 1,000 liters) per capi-ta per day, while Tucsonians, who rely entirely on wells, use only 160 gallons. Under the management plan, Phoenix's consumptioo is to be reduced by 10 percent by 1990, and both cities must reduce per capita consumption to 140 gallons by 2025.

The first management plan un-der Arizona's Groundwater Management Act, for the first time imposing restrictions according to ways of living on water use by municipalities and developers. was recently released in draft form, and the complaints are coming in from the state's diverse water-using interests.

"I have a real great fear that unless we take another look at these rules they're talking about we may end up hurting the life-styles and aesthetic values that are important to us," said Leonard Ducker, the head of the Municipal Water Users Association, made up of Phoenix and its suburbs in the Salt River Valley.
Protest was found when the Water Resources Department declared that it wanted to start reducing the greenery. Arizona has made a major industry of golf and suntans, but Dueker and other Arizooans originally from greener regions are loath to lose such reminders of home,

In its proposed management plan, the department said that after a certain date golf courses could no longer be all grass; that private pools could not exceed a certain very large size; that private decorative ponds and lakes, a major prestige item in real estate developments here, could no longer be dug, and that beginning next July highway medians may oo longer be covered with grass. This is the first of five management plans that will impose progressively stricter limitations on water use until 2025. "We've talked to the golf people, and they can have a nice golf course without all that grass," said W. Don Maughan, deputy director of the Water Resources Department. "People want further growth in Arizona, and the only way to do that is to be careful with the water supply."

Arizona shares its problem of declining underground water reserves with a half-dozen other states, including Texas, Nebras-ka, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Florida, none of which has been able to force the issue as far.

in the Pecos Valley of New Mexico. deep rifts in the ground in other states have tried to cut back. The high plains of Texas between Amarillo and Lubbock have experienced severe ground water depletion, forcing the abandonment of some farmland, but an effort at self-policing water restraints failed to avert the drying up of many wells. Io 1979, California proposed a modest plan requiring areas with underground water depletion to monitor the problem and to devise plans for self-restraint within a certain time or the state would step in, but the effort failed to gain the necessary support. Parts of Oklahoma show evidence of severe drops in the level of the Ogalalla aquifer, the un-derground pool of water that stretches from the Dakotas to north Texas, but there is no concerted effort to balance this with natural recharge of the aquifer. In all these states, the heaviest user of ground water is agriculture, and a striking feature of the Arizona law is a plan to cut back sharply on the $2-billion-a-year crops of citrus, alfaifa and cotton that use nine-tenths of the state's well water.

"Part of the problem is that we have a very arid state, yet 89 percent of the water goes to agricul-ture," said Beverly Beddow, the Water Resources Department's spokesman. "We don't want to elimioate agriculture by any means, but perhaps we ought to think we are a little overextended in that direction and that we ought to think about a different approach."

The different approach is to substitute population growth for farming. Without agriculture's drain on water supplies, Arizona would have enough water to support 20 million people instead of running a severe water "deficit" with only 2.8 million people.

By 2025, Arizona aims to squeeze enough water out of anoual consumption to cover 2.5 million acres (1 million hectares), The signs of ground water de-pletion — abandoned farmland
